5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO.US

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

Have you ever heard of Candida auris? It's a fungus that can cause sometimes-deadly infections. Though it's been found in New York before, health officials now say its presence here is "concerning." In a report published in a CDC journal on emerging infectious diseases, health experts detail how this is the first time they've seen a drug-resistant Candida species cause a large outbreak in this area — and most cases are linked to New York City hospitals. Read more on the outbreak inside and at metro.us.

KAVANAUGH'S ACCUSER WILLING TO TESTIFY

1 A lawyer for the woman accusing Brett Kavanaugh, President Donald Trump's U.S. Supreme Court nominee, of sexual assault told a Senate panel the professor would be willing to testify next week if it provides "terms that are fair and which ensure her safety," an email obtained by U.S. media on Thursday showed. Christine Blasey Ford, a psychology professor at Palo Alto University in California, has been given a Friday deadline to decide whether to testify before the Judiciary Committee, but Republican lawmakers and the accuser remained locked in a high-stakes standoff over whether she will appear. The email from Ford's lawyer, Debra Katz, was reported on by the New York Times, Washington Post and CNN. "As you are aware, she's been receiving death threats which have been reported to the FBI and she and her family have been forced out of their home," Katz wrote to the committee staff, according to the Washington Post. "She wishes to testify, provided that we can agree on terms that are fair and which ensure her safety."

CARGILL RECALLS OVER 65 TONS OF GROUND BEEF

2 Cargill Meat has recalled over 130,000 pounds of ground beef due to possible E. coli contamination, affecting nearly a dozen of its products. According to Wednesday's release by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), the products were made from the "chuck portion of the carcass" and may be contaminated with "Escherichia coli 026." The recall applies to approximately 132,606 pounds of ground beef products from Cargill. There are 12 products affected by this Cargill beef recall. They all have establishment number "EST. 86R," were produced and packaged on June 21, 2018 and have a "use or freeze by" date of July 11. FSIS tells consumers who have purchased the ground beef in question to throw it away. FSIS also advises consumers to safely prepare and fully cook their raw meat and to "only consume ground beef that has been cooked to a temperature of 160°F." These affected products were flagged after the FSIS was notified on Aug. 16 of an investigation regarding E. coli 026 illnesses. This investigation has now identified 17 illnesses and one death related to the potential contamination.

FORMER GOV. CUOMO AIDE JOE PERCOCO SENTENCED IN CORRUPTION TRIAL

3 Joe Percoco, former top aide to Gov. Andrew Cuomo, leaves federal court after being sentenced to six years in prison for corruption charges on Thursday in New York City. Percoco was convicted of taking more than $300,000 in bribes from a developer and energy company, among other corruption charges.

SUIT TARGETS STUDENT LOAN DEBT RELIEF FRAUD

4 New York's attorney general on Thursday sued 10 companies and two executives over their alleged roles in a scam to induce thousands of struggling borrowers into buying student loan debt relief services that they could have received for free. Attorney General Barbara Underwood said defendants typically charged more than $1,000 for their services, often imposing usurious interest rates, after luring borrowers with false claims such as being affiliated with the government, or that their help was needed if borrowers wanted relief. Underwood said about $1.34 trillion of federal student loan debt is outstanding, and that the defendants targeted many of the nearly 10 million borrowers who are late on their payments. The defendants include Debt Resolve Inc., a Hawthorne, N.Y.-based company that owns some of the other defendants, and its current and former chief executives, Bruce Bellmare and Stanley Freimuth. Hutton Ventures LLC, which is based in Santa Ana, Calif., and is a business partner of Debt Resolve, and a financing company, Equitable Acceptance Corp of Minnetonka, Minn. are also among the defendants.

'SUGE' PLEADS NO CONTEST TO MANSLAUGHTER

5 Rap mogul Marion "Suge" Knight pleaded no contest in Los Angeles on Thursday to manslaughter, part of a plea agreement with prosecutors that calls for him to serve 28 years in prison. Knight, co-founder of influential hip-hop label Death Row Records, entered the plea ahead of his scheduled trial on murder charges stemming from accusations that he ran down two men with his pickup truck near a burger stand in the Los Angeles suburb of Compton on Jan. 29, 2015. Knight appeared in court to enter the plea wearing an orange jail jumpsuit. He spoke only to answer a series of questions from Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Ronald Cohen. The former music producer is scheduled to be sentenced in October and will be given a 28-year sentence under the term of his plea deal with the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office. As part of the agreement, murder charges against Knight will be dismissed by prosecutors, along with separate criminal cases charging him with robbery and making criminal threats.

Health experts detail 'concerning' outbreak of Candida auris fungus in NYC

A new report published in the CDC Emerging Infectious Diseases journal looks at Candida auris infections in New York City hospitals.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

New York City health care facilities are seeing a "concerning" amount of Candida auris outbreaks, according to a new report published in the Centers for Disease Control's Emerging Infectious Diseases journal.

The report, published in the October 2018 issue of the journal, is authored by multiple New York State Department of Health employees, including Eleanor Adams, a physician with the department, and Emily Lutterloh, a physician and director of the department's Bureau of Healthcare Associated Infections. Multiple CDC employees are listed as authors as well.

Candida auris, also referred to as C. auris, is a yeast or fungus that "presents a serious global health threat," according to the CDC.

It's concerning, experts say, for a few main reasons. First, some infections can be multidrug-resistant, meaning the fungus is unaffected by the common antifungal drugs used to treat Candida auris infections.

Second, Candida auris can live on surfaces for weeks, leading to outbreaks that spread through patients and contaminated health care surfaces and equipment.

Third, it's difficult to properly identify Candida auris with "standard laboratory methods." If a lab does not have the proper technology, it may misidentify the fungus, causing improper management of the outbreak.

Candida auris can enter the bloodstream, causing severe infections that experts say can lead to death. The fungus can also cause infections in wounds and in the ears.

to 60 percent of people with C. auris infections have died," according to the CDC. "However, many of these people had other serious illnesses that also increased their risk of death."

In the report, Adams and her colleagues wrote that Candida auris "has become endemic to hospitals in some parts of the world," and that the detection of the fungus in New York health care facilities is concerning.

"In recent decades in public health we have focused on the threat of multidrug-resistant bacteria," Adams said in a statement to Metro. "This study illustrates the potential for, and possible challenges from, an endemic or epidemic multidrug-resistant yeast in the United States. This is the first time we've seen a resistant Candida species cause a large outbreak in New York state."

clinical cases of Candida auris in NY

The authors' research indicates an "interconnected web of affected health care facilities throughout New York City" responsible for the outbreak.

In the paper, researchers reviewed 51 clinical cases of Candida auris. All but one of these cases had been diagnosed in New York City: 21 from seven hospitals in Brooklyn; 16 from three hospitals and one private medical office in Queens; 12 from five hospitals and one long-term acute care hospital in Manhattan; and one from a hospital in the Bronx.

The one case not diagnosed in New York City was of a patient in a western New York hospital, though the authors noted that the patient had "recently been admitted to an involved Brooklyn hospital." All of these patients also had serious medical conditions at the same time they contracted a Candida auris infection.

There have been Candida auris infections in other areas of the country (as well as in other countries like India, Venezuela, Japan and more), but the New York City area is home to the most confirmed clinical cases in the U.S.

Why is that? Well, the authors don't really know. They suggest it might be because of the large, interconnected health care facility network here, or maybe the higher prevalence is linked to "multiple introductions into this international port of entry."

In response to these outbreaks, the state health department has amped up its infection prevention and control efforts, including webinars for clinicians and a Candida auris fact page for the public, with the hopes of preventing outbreaks and reducing the spread of Candida auris in New York and beyond.

"New York state has launched a comprehensive effort to slow the spread of this organism by issuing health advisories to inform healt care facilities and clinical laboratories about C. auris, educating physicians and health care facility staff about C. auris and essential infection control measures, conducting site visits at health care facilities with patients with C. auris, obtaining cultures from patients and the environment to detect spread, and enhancing laboratory capacity to process thousands of laboratory specimens," Adams said. "We are proud of the teamwork put forth by all our partners, including health care facilities, to tackle this challenge."

'Multiple fatalities' in Maryland Rite Aid shooting

Officials responded to a shooting at a Rite Aid distribution center in Harford County.

The shooter killed three and wounded three before fatally shooting herself.

Several people are confirmed dead following a shooting at a drugstore distribution center on Thursday in Harford County, Md., according to authorities.

"At this time I can confirm multiple wounded and multiple fatalities," Harford County Sheriff Jeff Gahler said at a Thursday press conference.

According to CNN, the shooter killed three people and wounded three others before fatally shooting herself. The shooting occurred at a Rite Aid distribution center.

Gahler said that law enforcement responded to a call at 9:06 a.m. The Harford County Sheriff's Office wrote on Twitter around that time that the "situation is still fluid." Gahler reiterated that message at the noon press conference.

"We are so preliminary into this investigation," he said. "We are going to give you as much information as we can right now even though it's very preliminary and very limited."

Officials believe that the shooter acted alone. The lone suspect died at a nearby hospital.

Agents from the Baltimore offices of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) and the FBI also responded to the shooting, per the sheriff's office.

> "Our prayers are with all those impacted."
> Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan on Twitter

The Rite Aid distribution center is in Aberdeen, about 32 miles northeast of Baltimore. The area of the reported shooting includes a church and a business district. It is near the Aberdeen Proving Ground, a large Army facility where military technology is developed and tested, according to Harford County's website.

Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan said on Twitter Thursday morning that his office was "closely monitoring the horrific shooting." He offered state resources to Harford County as it continues to deal with the situation, officials said.

"Our prayers are with all those impacted, including our first responders," Hogan wrote. "The State stands ready to offer any support."

The shooting occurred a day after a man shot and wounded four people, including a police officer, at a Pennsylvania court building before he was killed by police, according to Pennsylvania State Police. On Wednesday, a shooter also injured four people in Middleton, Wis.

Celebrate Polish heritage at the Children's Museum of the Arts

Stop by for a full day of Polish art, music and food brought to you by the Polish Cultural Institute New York.

PAT KING

On Sunday, Sept. 23, the Children's Museum of the Arts will be partnering with the Polish Cultural Institute for a full day of workshops and events inspired by Polish contemporary art.

This festival will also shine a light on what Polish-Americans have brought to this country since they first came over in the 1600s. For instance, did you know that the first Polish-American settlers in the Jamestown colony staged the very first labor strike in America? After being denied representation in the Virginia assembly, the settlers put down their tools and refused to work and demanded their democratic rights be upheld.

"That was kind of exciting for us because we focus on civic engagement and sort of looking at how certain cultures have added to the narrative of freedom, inclusion and engagement in our country," explains Michelle Lopez, director of Community Programs at the Children's Museum of the Arts. "Because we're a contemporary art museum," she adds, "most of the artists that we show are dealing with the subject of identity. It's just kind of a natural storyline that emerges."

The festival runs from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will officially begin with a special storytime from guest author Tomek Bogacki, who will read his book "The Story of a Blue Bird" at 11 a.m. The fun will continue with interactive performances by children's folk group Krakowianki i Górale at 12:30 p.m. and 2 p.m. They will perform two dances, Krakowiak and Polonez.

The workshops at this festival will help to instill this rich independent heritage for younger generations. Such workshops will include the Polish puppetry class "Pavillions," inspired by the renowned exhibition "Pavilionesque" by Polish artist Paulina Olowska. That show had a large wooden pavilion used as a backdrop for her contemporary puppetry. This exhibit will provide materials for children to build their own mini-pavilions to put on their one-of-a-kind puppet shows.

REQUEST FOR QUALIFICATIONS
DEMOLITION OF 1- TO 4- FAMILY HOMES SUBSTANTIALLY DAMAGED BY HURRICANE SANDY IN QUEENS, BROOKLYN, AND STATEN ISLAND

This Request for Qualifications ("RFQ") is being issued by Project Rebuild, Inc. ("PRI") to establish a Pre-Qualified List ("PQL") of demolition contractors that demonstrate the requisite experience to furnish all labor, materials, and equipment to perform demolitions of 1- to 4- family homes that were substantially damaged or destroyed by Hurricane Sandy in Queens, Brooklyn and Staten Island. The non-emergency property demolitions are being carried out as part of PRI's responsibilities in administering the Build-It-Back Single-Family Acquisition, Buyout, and Resettlement Incentives Program ("Program"). The Program is being administered by PRI with oversight from the Mayor's Office of Housing Recovery Operations ("HRO") and NYC Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD").

Qualified demolition contractors are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity and submit a response to this RFQ detailing their credentials to be added to the PQL. Once approved, the qualified demolition contractor will be invited to submit bids for a home or cluster(s) of homes that detail all demolition and associated services as consistent with the Scope of Work detailed in the Rider A of the RFQ. Selected contractors will be selected by identifying bids that are of the best value and most advantageous to the Program based on the lowest price. It is important to note that not all contractors deemed qualified will be selected to participate in the Program.

Cleo, the 4-month-old puppy found tied to a pole in the Bronx. ALL PHOTOS LOOKING GLASS ANIMAL RESCUE

4-Month-old beagle found beaten, tied to a pole in the Bronx

"How she survived is a miracle," the Looking Glass Animal Rescue organization said.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

A 4-month-old beagle puppy was found in the Bronx tied to a pole and suffering from severe injuries after reportedly being beaten, according to an animal rescue organization.

Officials from Looking Glass Animal Rescue took in the puppy, which they've named Cleo, on Monday and are asking for help from the public identifying the person responsible.

The puppy suffered a fractured nasal cavity, a fractured eye socket, and a fractured jaw, according to Looking Glass Animal Rescue, as well as symmetrical fractures in both cheeks, which the organization said could only come from being slammed by two objects at the same time or from something like a door.

Cleo also had an abscess on her head, parasites in her belly and cuts and scratches on her neck and shoulders.

"How she survived is a miracle," the organization said in a statement. "But she has a long road ahead and we will not stop until she not only gets pain-free and healthy but also gets the justice she deserves."

The NYPD confirmed that an anonymous caller reported seeing a dog beaten in the Bronx on Monday. Officers from the 48th precinct went to the area, where they found the puppy abandoned.

A representative for the department told Metro that upon observation, the dog did not appear to have any obvious external injuries and there were no witnesses around to talk to police about the incident, so they could not pursue an animal cruelty case. The responding officers took the puppy to city animal care.

Animal Care Centers of NYC confirmed that the puppy was found tied in front of a Bronx barber shop on East 182 Street. The puppy was brought to the Bronx Admissions Center, where Animal Care Centers staff then arranged for emergency transport to the Manhattan care center, so that Cleo could be assessed by a veterinarian.

"Our intake staff was visibly shaken by how bad the dog looked and acted," an Animal Care Centers of NYC rep said in an email.

Officials at Animal Care Centers of NYC also reached out to Looking Glass Animal Rescue to take in the puppy and help provide treatment. The rescue is an Animal Care Centers of NYC New Hope partner.

Cleo's vet bill is more than $5,000, according to Looking Glass Animal Rescue.

"She is in critical condition right now, but has been eating like a champ — which is a very good sign," the Animal Care Centers of NYC rep said.

The rescue organization is pushing for an animal cruelty investigation and asking anyone with information to contact Crime Stoppers at 1-800-577-TIPS or online at nypdcrimestoppers.nyc.gov. Tips to Crime Stoppers can be reported anonymously. Looking Glass Animal Rescue is also seeking donations to help pay for Cleo's care.

Has the cult of celebrity become a snake that eats itself? We've entered an age where we can't remember why we idolize our idols. That is exactly the theme of this Grumble we received from our reader Rachel Garber.

Take it away, Rachel!

READER WRITE-INS:

FAMOUS FOR BEING FAMOUS

I'm sick and tired— and frankly, disgusted — with the relentless promotion of people who are "celebrities" for no other reason than their ability to promote themselves, and with the stupid media that has chosen to make them relevant for no other reason than the headlines they create. It boggled my mind when I discovered how many years "Keeping Up with the Kardashians" has been on TV. Why are they still a thing? And wtf happened to TLC? Once upon a time it was an interesting channel. But in the last number of years it's been the go-to channel for Honey Boo Boo and "Toddlers & Tiaras" (wow, nothing like a channel devoted to promoting the specialization of little girls). I've lost track of the utter trash that is featured on that money-grubbing channel. I'm just disappointed that they've forgotten what TLC stands for. I guess the new meaning is "Learning" how we've found new ways to cash in on viewers' love of trash TV. — Rachel Garber, Metro US reader

Oscar Isaac and Olivia Wilde star in "Life Itself." AMAZON STUDIOS

Dan Fogelman wants 'Life Itself' to remind people how beautiful the world is

The writer and director insists the comedy-drama doesn't sugarcoat it, though.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Dan Fogelman has been building toward "Life Itself" for around a decade.

Having cut his teeth as a screenwriter on the undeniably enjoyable family friendly-fare "Cars," "Fred Claus," "Bolt" and "Tangled," Fogelman moved into more dramatic and weighty, but still always funny, territory with "Crazy, Stupid, Love," "The Guilt Trip," "Last Vegas," "Danny Collins" and, most successfully, his hit show "This Is Us."

"Life Itself" takes the themes and tones of Fogelman's recent output and intensifies them to the nth degree.

Set over various generations of people in New York and Spain, it merges the stories of Oscar Isaac, Olivia Wilde and Annette Bening with those of Laia Costa, Sergio Peris-Mencheta, Antonio Banderas and Alex Mooner and then, for good measure, those of Olivia Cooke, Mandy Patinkin, and Jean Smart.

"I was trying to make something unusual and different but still tonally lived in a space that I like and that is familiar to me," Fogelman recently told Metro. "My belief is that often times when we go to the movie theaters nowadays, or we go even to watch a television show, we expect it to be one certain thing.

"We call it an R-rated comedy, a heavy Oscar drama or a horror movie. I find that life is often a lot of things at once and from day to day," he adds. "I recently lost one of my best friends very early. It was one of the saddest days of my life. But it was also a day that was filled with joy and laughter and celebration."

GETTY IMAGES

But while Fogelman is intent on taking his audiences on an emotional journey that will make you sad and cry before making you tense and laugh, there is one rule that he strictly adheres to with his work.

"I have never wanted to make anything that made people feel worse than when they came in," he says. "With this film, as I was writing and making it, the world — and our country, specifically — is in a very weird and difficult place. We are very divided.

"The internet has turned very dark and very cynical. While I want people to walk out of the movie theater feeling better than they did, I didn't want to pull any punches, too," Fogelman adds. "I didn't want to pretend that life is very easy. My life has experienced great tragedy. And collectively the country and as a people we are all feeling a little down. No matter where we stand politically."

Fogelman also notes that "it is important to be reminded that despite all of the ugliness, tragedy, and all of the personal and interpersonal stuff that plagues us and affects us on a daily basis, if you take one step back you can see that there is real beauty and love and optimism in the human experience.

"I think that is something we are forgetting right now. The goal of the film is to not sugarcoat how difficult and tragic and dark and scary life can often feel," he says. "But at the same time, [I wanted to] speak out loud what my worldview is. Which is, essentially, if you keep going and push the story further, that there is love."

"Life Itself" is now in theaters.

James Ransone insists he's just lucky

James Ransone stars in Hulu's "The First." GETTY IMAGES

But it's obvious why "The First" star is in such high demand.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

James Ransone immediately wants you to know just how lucky he is.

In fact, it is the first thing he says in response to questions about how he got involved in "The First," the Hulu space epic led by Sean Penn and created by Beau Willimon about the first manned mission to Mars, in which he stars as astronaut Nick Fletcher.

"I am actually just very lucky to be involved. Because I have known Beau and producer Jordan Tappis for a long time," says Ransone. "I have known Jordan the longest. We kind of grew up together. I actually helped them to pull a prank on their old friend a long time ago."

Of course, we had to know more.

"We played a prank on an old friend of Beau's where I actually pretended to be a vet with PTSD that they picked up on the side of the road," he says. "Then we convinced his friend that I had basically taken Beau hostage and then he freaked out. That was the prank we pulled on him for his birthday."

Despite their past, Ransone still can't work out if this old friendship means that the character of Nick Fletcher was written specifically for him, though.

"That would be really nice if it was. But honestly I don't know," says Ransone. "I knew Lorraine the casting director really well. Even though I have known those guys for a long time, I am just really lucky to be a part of it."

But while Ransone is quick to reiterate just how lucky he is to be involved in "The First," there was one specific scene in the third episode of the first season that made him genuinely believe that Beau Willimon had created Fletcher just for him.

"There's one scene in the show where my character talks about almost drowning where I was like, 'Did they write this for me?' Because I [had] this whole experience where I almost drowned in this African river," says Ransone. "So I was like, 'Oh, this is really easy, I can just tell my whole story. Because that is totally what happened to me.'"

The next time Ransone, who is currently shooting the part of Eddie Kaspbrak in the much-anticipated follow-up to "It," notes just how lucky he has been with his career, he quickly explains that his good fortune goes way beyond simply standing in front of a camera.

"The truth is, I am really lucky. I am talking about life experience. Because it wasn't just 'The Wire.' It was 'Generation Kill,' I was in Africa for almost a year, spending time with Marines that became really close friends of mine. That enriched my life," says Ransone. "Then I went to work on 'Treme.' That wasn't as big of a show and I didn't have as big of a part but I got to spend a lot of time with David Chang working in his restaurant. That stuff is always the coolest to me.

"David Chang gave me the best career advice I have ever heard," he adds. "To get to spend time with anyone that is the master of what they create is just awesome. That is so cool. I think it exceeds just being an actor."

W. Kamau Bell opens up about his friend Anthony Bourdain ahead of the final season premiere of "Parts Unknown" this weekend. GETTY IMAGES

W. Kamau Bell on the life lessons he learned from Anthony Bourdain

We spoke with the comedian and CNN host ahead of his appearance at the Tribeca TV Festival

patrick.king@metro.us

The world mourned this year as we lost one of our real-life giants of culture, Anthony Bourdain. People all over the world paid tribute to his tragic and untimely passing. CNN will be broadcasting the final seven episodes of his long-running and critically acclaimed series "Parts Unknown" starting this Sunday. One of the notable guests who will appear in these last episodes is comedian and "United Shades of America" exec-producer W. Kamau Bell. We caught up with Bell ahead of his appearance at this year's Tribeca TV Festival, where he will present the season 12 premiere of "Parts Unknown" in a discussion moderated by CNN anchor John Berman with director Morgan Fallon, showrunner Sandy Zweig and executive producer Lydia Tenaglia.

You will be one of the guests on the final episodes of "Parts Unknown," which will be screened at Tribeca. What was your experience like working with Anthony Bourdain and getting to know him over the years?
He was everything I wanted him to be and more. Funny, kind, empathic, interested, interesting. We constantly talked about the art of TV-making, politics, comedy and our kids.

I know it's a hard thing to think about, but he had such a distinct presence in culture and how we report on the world outside of the U.S. What lessons did you learn from him and take to your show, "United Shades of America"?
Most of the lessons I learned were about how to make better TV. Tony had been doing this for more than 15 years, so the battles I'm fighting three seasons into my show, he fought and won 10 years ago. We talked about the importance of music, how to get better music, the power of silence in editing and how to conserve your energy when you are filming all day.

Lastly, with everything going on with this administration, is there any chance of reviving your podcast "Politically Re-Active" with Hari Kondabolu?
Unfortunately, I don't think so. Me and Hari are still great friends. I actually owe him a text. But we both got so busy that it became too stressful to do. But we are already talking about projects we can do together. There will be more Bell & Kondabolu, or Kondabolu & Bell, depending on who you like more.

What to watch for as Giants, Texans try to avoid 0-3 start

The Giants could see their season unravel quickly as they visit Houston on Sunday.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Two teams who entered the season with playoff aspirations are now trying to avoid a damning 0-3 start as the New York Giants visit the Houston Texans.

Both teams are struggling mightily, offensively. Of their combined four games, the Texans are the only team to say they have hit the 20-point mark in a game. That came in a 27-20 Week 1 loss to the New England Patriots.

For the Giants, there are some alarming similarities to the team that went 3-13 just a year ago, even though new general manager Dave Gettleman attempted to rebuild on the fly over the offseason.

So far, it's not looking good, though.

The team that loses on Sunday can virtually kiss their season goodbye already.

Since 1981, only five teams have started 0-3 and made the playoffs. Here is what you need to watch for on Sunday afternoon NRG Stadium.

BET OF THE DAY

The Bills could very well be the worst team in the NFL by the end of the year, but the 16.5 spread against Minnesota is a bit much. Last week, the Chargers shredded the Bills but the final deficit for Buffalo was just 11 points. The Vikings are good but shouldn't be 16.5 favorites against anyone.

The Pick: BUFFALO (+16.5)

MORE ODDS AT METROBET.US

O-LINE WOES... AGAIN

Once again, quarterback Eli Manning is getting no time in the pocket as New York's offensive line continues to struggle.

They gave up six sacks to the Dallas Cowboys last week as Manning was either shuffling for his life or getting off dink-and-dump passes to Saquon Barkley.

Speaking of Barkley, the rookie running back has been given no room to run during the first two games of his NFL career.

After a 100-plus-yard outing on his debut, a bulk of it coming on a 68-yard touchdown run, Barkley averaged just 2.5 yards per carry against the Cowboys last Sunday night.

Elusiveness and an ability to break tackles can only get you so far when your offensive line isn't opening up any sort of running lanes.

The line isn't going to get much of a reprieve this week as they will face a tough Texans pass rush that features J.J. Watt. The All-Pro defensive end will be matched up against Ereck Flowers, a recipe for disaster.

They might be able to avoid linebacker Jadeveon Clowney, who has been limited leading up to Week 3 because of a back injury.

TWEAKING THE OUTSIDE GAME

When Manning was rarely given a few seconds to scan the field against Dallas, there wasn't much to throw toward.

Odell Beckham Jr. and Sterling Shepard were stymied for most of the evening against Dallas, though Manning did miss Beckham on a few wide-open looks as the pocket collapsed around him.

Beckham had just four catches on the night after an 11-catch effort against the Jaguars while Shepard had three.

Those aren't the kind of numbers you want to see from the Giants' No. 1 pass catcher who recently was made the richest receiver in NFL history.

But Beckham isn't getting much help.

Given the state of the offensive line, the Giants can't afford to be sending Beckham or Shepard on long, convoluted routes. Keep it short and concise in order for Manning to have another option besides Barkley because he is likely going to see the same kind of pressure against the Texans.

Both Beckham and Shepard can be elusive when they get the ball in their hands, so a series of wide-receiver screens and slants could do wonders for Manning's confidence.

CAN THE DEFENSE KEEP BUILDING?

Lost within the offense's ineptitude is the Giants' defense, currently a top-10 group in the NFL.

Much of the success, though, has come from the pass defense, something that hasn't necessarily been a calling card of the organization over the past few decades.

Usually a staunch unit against the run, the Giants have allowed 275 yards on the ground through two weeks this year.

Granted, they were playing against teams featuring Leonard Fournette and Ezekiel Elliott, but only three teams have allowed more rushing yards so far. It's worth noting though that they've only allowed one rushing touchdown.

The Giants secondary has been the backbone of the defense as it ranks second in the NFL against the pass, with just 328 yards allowed against the Jaguars and Cowboys.

They're going to meet a dual-threat quarterback in Deshaun Watson, who will be keen on shaking off a slow start. Not only can he beat the Giants with a strong arm, but he can scramble, too. That kind of skill set is something the Giants have never matched up well against.

NFL Week 3: Pats will bounce back big

MetroBet takes a look at NFL Week 3.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
letters@metro.us

MetroBet looks at where to place your money this weekend.

Indianapolis Colts at Philadelphia Eagles (-6)
The Eagles exit a disappointing loss to Tampa Bay on the road last week, but the locker room was quickly rejuvenated when it was announced that Carson Wentz will be back under center for Week 3. Nick Foles was serviceable in his stint as the starter, but he couldn't match the MVP-quality production that Wentz had until his Week 14 injury last season.

Philly has yielded some profitable betting angles of late, as they're 4-1 ATS in their last five, and 8-2 ATS in their last 10 at home. As a six-point favorite or higher, the Eagles are one point shy from covering in seven straight.

The Colts did well to pick up a road win at Washington last week, but Indy has struggled to build momentum. Per oddsshark.com, they've dropped each of their last eight contests following a victory.
The pick: Eagles -6

New York Giants at Houston Texans (-6)
The betting public spoke early in this matchup, as the opening line of Houston -3.5 was quickly pushed up to -6 after Eli Manning and company managed just 13 points against the Cowboys on Sunday night. The Texans have been an awful bet dating back to last season, dropping each of their last seven straight-up and ATS, but they draw some favorable matchups with the Giants.

New York's secondary is among the best at defending the pass, but their front seven is full of holes. They've surrendered an average of 137.5 rushing yards through two games. That bodes well for Lamar Miller, who's averaging 4.3 yards per carry (34 attempts) this year. Alfred Blue and DeShaun Watson also contribute to the NFL's most potent ground game through two weeks.

The Giants continue to be an unreliable bet, as they've dropped four of their last five road games against the spread. They look like a fade once more.
The pick: Texans -6

Expect Duron Harmon, Stephon Gilmore and the Patriots defense to bounce back in Week 3 against the Lions. GETTY IMAGES

New England Patriots (-6.5) at Detroit Lions
The Patriots pay a visit to Detroit on Sunday night to face off against former defensive coordinator Matt Patricia and the Lions. And while that may be a reason to tune in, there may not be any reason to stay awake for the fourth quarter.

The Patriots were taken to task by a hungry Jaguars squad in Jacksonville last week, but Detroit is a significantly easier opponent. Tom Brady, along with new pickup Josh Gordon, should be able to dismantle the league's worst scoring defense through two games. That unit is dealing with injuries to their two biggest names, Ezekiel Ansah and Darius Slay.

Matt Stafford will put up numbers, but his effort is unlikely to be enough to outgun the opposition.
The pick: Patriots -6.5
